(57) Abstract :

The present invention provides Tilted visual feedback by convex mirror to improve outcomes in lateropulsive pusher syndrome. The mirror includes a reflective glass having a mirror surface; a frame that holds the mirror surface in place; and a base that supports the entire structure. The mirror can be moved easily from one position to another as required. The mirror can be tilted according to patient requirement. The mirror cover a wider view compared to conventional mirror. The mirror current invention can be manufactured at a reasonable cost. The mirror current invention is extremely durable. The mirror plastic covering the mirror protects it from damage. The mirror standing frame provides mirror stability for easy use.
