Topic: "Unexpected intra operative cardiac event during an elective ear surgery"

Abstract:

Unexpected cardiac event during the intraoperative period contributes to higher morbidity and mortality. All patients undergoing surgery and anaesthesia are at a risk of having a cardiorespiratory event perioperatively. Here we present a case of 70-year-old male patient with diagnosis of Left chronic suppurative otitis media (active squamosal), planned for left tympano-mastoidectomy under general anaesthesia. Patient developed cardiac event during surgery. Immediate resuscitation was done by 5 cycles of CPR by anaesthesia team. Patient was shifted to ICU and managed by cardiology and critical care department. Patient was shifted from ICU after 3 days to ENT ward. Finally, patient discharged after 9 days of surgery. We wish to highlight importance of unexpected morbidity during an elective surgery and multi-disciplinary management in a tertiary care hospital.
