Topic: “AI in Clinical Practice and Medical Education: Opportunities, Challenges, and Ethical Considerations with Practical Predictive Analytics in Healthcare - Building Simple Risk Models.”

Presenter: Mr. Manish Srivastava
Director IT
Advisor ACIC SRHU

Abstract:

Artificial Intelligence (AI) is playing a pivotal role in revolutionizing healthcare, from improving clinical decision-making to enhancing medical education. This session will delve into the practical use of a wide range of AI tools and technologies currently available to clinicians and educators, outlining how these can be integrated into everyday workflows. We will also explore methodologies and resources for those interested in developing custom AI solutions tailored to specific clinical or educational challenges. Recognizing the value of continuous innovation, the session will highlight essential steps to initiate and conduct Medical AI research — covering everything from data collection and algorithm design to validation and ethical oversight. Attendees will gain actionable insights for adopting AI-driven strategies, fostering interdisciplinary collaborations, and driving forward responsible, impactful research in the evolving landscape of Medical AI.

All Faculty & Post Graduate Residents are required to attend the CME.
