Moderator: - Dr Suman Rastogi, Assistant Professor, Emergency Medicine

Abstract: Difficult airway management remains a major challenge in emergency and critical care practice, requiring rapid assessment, adherence to airway algorithms, and timely escalation to rescue techniques. Standard difficult airway protocols emphasize oxygenation, stepwise airway planning, and preparedness for failed intubation scenarios. However, certain clinical situations demand deviation from conventional protocols and adoption of individualized airway strategies based on anatomical and pathological constraints. This grand rounds presentation discusses three challenging airway cases highlighting both protocol-based management and adaptive modifications in real-world emergency practice.
