Abstract:

The Compulsory Rotatory Medical Internship (CRMI) in India is a mandatory one-year structured training program set by the National Medical Commission for MBBS graduates to provide hands-on clinical exposure required for independent primary care practice. Following major reforms in November 2021, it follows a competency-, and outcome-based model, with pre-defined skills, active mentorship, and logbook documentation, supplemented by end-posting assessment. Within this re-structured framework, the Department of Community Medicine now includes a 3-month training (earlier 2-month), extending beyond primary care through rotations in District Hospitals (DH), Sub-DH, and Community Health Centers (CHC). This broadens interns’ understanding of epidemiology and public health practices, with a strong focus on the implementation of National Health Programs, disease surveillance, family adoption, health education, outpatient care, epidemic response, and outreach camps. At HIMS, SRHU, the Community Medicine internship training program is delivered across eight operational centers, including CHC Doiwala; SPS Government Hospital, Rishikesh; Urban-Health Training Center (HTC), Kurkawala; Rural-HTC, Shyampur (erstwhile Gauri Mafi); HTC Ghamandpur; Himalayan Sanjeevani Telemedicine Centre (Village Toli, Pauri); Tobacco Cessation Center; and Lactation Room, ensuring comprehensive exposure to varied healthcare settings. Weekly rotations, high patient volumes, and strong administrative cum inter-disciplinary support are contributing to enriched clinical exposure. The program has achieved a commendable average intern feedback score of 4 out of 5 on a Likert scale, with nearly half of interns expressing interest in pursuing post-graduate studies in Community Medicine, reflecting the program’s positive impact.

All Faculty & Post Graduate Residents are required to attend the CME.
