Report of Seminar

The seminar on “Cost Effectiveness” was conducted on 21st February 2026 in Classroom No. 4. With the objective of creating awareness about the importance of economic efficiency in healthcare delivery. Students and faculty members, whose active participation enriched the learning experience, attended the programme. The session began with an introduction to the concept of cost effectiveness, emphasizing the need to achieve optimal health outcomes with the most efficient use of available resources.

The speaker explained that cost effectiveness in healthcare involves comparing the costs and outcomes of different interventions to determine the best possible option for patients and institutions. Key aspects such as rational use of resources, evidence-based practices, reduction of unnecessary procedures, prevention strategies, and proper planning were discussed. The importance of cost-effective care in improving accessibility, maintaining quality standards, and supporting sustainable healthcare systems was highlighted. Examples from clinical practice illustrated how timely interventions, preventive measures, and standardized care pathways can reduce hospital stay and overall expenditure without compromising patient safety.

The seminar concluded with an interactive session where participants discussed practical strategies to promote cost-effective practices in their respective areas. Overall, the programme was informative and relevant, enhancing the understanding of students and faculty regarding the balance between quality care and financial responsibility in healthcare settings.
