Report

A session on Professional Ethics was held for MBBS students (Batch 2024-25) by Dr. Pragya, Associate Professor, Department of Forensic Medicine, HIMs, SRHU. It was aimed to provide MBBS students with a comprehensive understanding of professional ethics in healthcare and equip them with the knowledge and skills necessary to make ethical decisions in their future medical practices. The session began with an overview of the importance of ethics in medicine, emphasizing the role of ethics in building trust with patients and their broader community. The core ethical principles of beneficence, non-maleficence, autonomy, and justice were discussed in depth. Students learned how these principles apply to patient care and decision-making.
